

He might also have pointed to other essays, written at the same time he was writing The Stranger, on the need for a 40-hour work week, or to his editorial job on the newspaper Combat, which took the motto, "In war as in peace, the last word is said by those who never surrender."